MILLAIS' VERSATILITY. It Is Said He Was the Greatest Painter of the Age.

For a period of nearly 50 years Millais has been before the public as an artist and for the greater part of that time he has sustained his reputation as the greatest painter of his day, says Scribner's. He has painted history, romance, poetry, landscape, portraits and has made his mark in all.

No one else has attempted so wide a range of subjects, few have shown a greater variety of invention or approached him in his command over tools and materials. It is only within the last few years that he has shown any decline of power and it was only the other day that Mr. Watts, his grea colleague, observed to me of one of his pictures in the present exhibition of the Royal academy (1896) that as painting it was "good as ever.
